Publishing Scotland is the network body for the book publishing industry in Scotland, working to promote and protect the interest of its members, both nationally and internationally. It offers membership to publishers and those in associated professions (including editors, literary agents, printers and authors), and currently represents over 100 companies and individuals across the whole of Scotland. Publishing Scotland established BookSource, a book distribution company, in 1995, runs an online bookshop, BooksfromScotland.com, and Bookspotting, an app for smartphones to help discover Scottish titles.

Edinburgh Napier University is a dynamic, innovative and forward-looking institution dedicated to supplying educational services that are relevant to the needs of today's students and employers. By offering creatively designed courses, flexible study methods and accessible routes to higher education we equip our graduates for success in a competitive job market.

The School of Humanities at the University of Dundee prides itself on its world class and research-driven commitment to promoting the critical understanding of culture and society through interdisciplinary linkages across its full range of subjects from Archives, History, English and Film Studies through to Languages, Philosophy and Politics. The School demonstrates such commitment to excellence across its discipline areas in particular via degree course and research in areas as diverse as Comic Studies, Continental Philosophy, Creative Writing and Theatre Studies, Freedom, Security and Justice, Global History and Scottish Culture.

SAPPHIRE, the Scottish Archive of Print and Publishing History Records, is a consortium led by the School of Humanities at the University of Dundee with the Scottish Centre for the Book at Edinburgh Napier University. SAPHIRE aims to record the history of the Scottish printing and publishing industries and related trades and professions, and to make such information accessible to the public via publications, lectures, school learning resources and public exhibitions. SAPHIRE has been honoured with a Glenfiddich Living Scotland Award for its contribution to the preservation and promotion of Scotland's cultural heritage.
